Fair Hope Farm
Quaker Neck
1st Quarter 19th Century

Fair Hope Farm is a 20th Century name given to an old farm composed of parts of East Huntington, Tilghman's Farm and Norris Forest. The house itself stands on East Huntington and is an early 19th century frame farmhouse, 2-1/2 stories tall, five bays long, with a two-part service wing which is 1-1/2 stories tall. The entire structure is one room deep.

The house is similar to others on Quaker Neck in form and plan. Its plan consists of two rooms and central stairhall, with a dining room in what appears to have been the service wing. These are all located on the same level. At ground level in the service wing there is a three bay kitchen.

The dining room is refuted to be the earliest part of the house. It has a fine early 19th century yellow pine corner cupboard. The details of the stair in the main section appear to date from the 1840's, but the rest of the millwork is the product of Brognard Oakie, the Pennsylvania architect responsible for remodeling the house for Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stokes in 1935.¹

The farm was owned in the early 19th Century by Samuel Merritt ² whose family lived on the adjoining tract of Godlington Manor. During the period between 1836 and 1880, William Lamb owned the farm.³ In 1852 the house was listed as "in tolerable repair", which meant that it was not new.⁴ For thirty years before the Stokes family purchased the farm, it was the home of the William T. Maslin family.⁵

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Fair Hope is located on Quaker Neck south west of Chestertown. The house is a part of a complex of buildings, stables, barns, and tenant and guest houses. The garden front of the house overlooks pastures with a distant view of Broad Creek.

The main house is two and one-half stories tall with high brick foundation and gable roof with three gable dormers. This is a five bay frame house with a central hall and a series of wings telescoping to the southeast side. The building was restored and enlarged by the present owner in 1934 with assistance of Brognaid Okie, a Philadelphia architect.

Windows are evenly spaced on the main house. On the approach front are 12/12 sash windows with narrow trim made up of composite moldings of the type common in the Federal period. There is a window at the stair landing and below this the main entrance which has an entrance porch with conical roof and round columns. The roof is covered with black asphalt shingles. It is finished with a denticulated box cornice. The dormer windows have diagonally boarded cheeks.

On the garden front, 10-light, double casement windows are used on the second floor side bays with two narrow 6/4 sash windows in the central bay. 8/8 sash windows light the first floor. A shed roof porch with two benches shelters the entrance.

Enclosed brick chimneys are used in each gable end. The chimney back on the northwest is exposed.

The oldest portion of the dwelling is the first wing, a one and one-half story structure with low brick basement. It has wide, old weatherboarding and replacement trim on the door and window of the approach front. The attic is lighted with a single dormer with a small nine-pane sash. The steep gable roof is finished with a plain box cornice. There is one room per floor; that on the first is used as the dining room.

The kitchen is housed in a second one and one-half story wing; this one has two small six-pane windows on the upper floor and a gable roof. Also frame, the wing sets close to the ground. It is connected by a three bay, segmentally arched arcade, to a one and one-half story laundry with steep gable roof and large, exterior brick chimney. The arcade and laundry were added to the old house in 1934.

The interior paneling replaces the original interior finish which was lost. Its design is based upon a corner cupboard which remains in the dining room. Major down stairs rooms have raised and beveled paneled walls, that in the northeast room being natural cherry.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Fair Hope is significant as an example of early Kent County architecture and as a restoration. The old building has many typical features of an early 19th century farmhouse; it has telescoping wings, a central hall with stair and entrances, and an exposed chimney back. The restoration may also be interpreted as an historical document, "the state of the art" of restoration of the 1930's. Today, Fair Hope is an extraordinarily beautiful house, certainly grander than it was in its original state as the main house of a prosperous Kent County farm. The beauty of the building is enhanced by well designed landscaping.

Pair Hope Farm house is a $2\frac{1}{2}$ story, five bay long, frame clapboard building with an "A" roof having three dormers on each side. The structure sits on a high brick basement and there is a two bay, $1\frac{1}{2}$ story wing with a three bay long kitchen wing, having the same pitch as the $1\frac{1}{2}$ story roof, plus a colonade and wash house. The windows have 12/12 sash on first story, ten-pane double casements on the second story south facade (8/12 on the gable and the north facade) and 12 pane casements in the dormers. The center bay of the second story south facade has two windows with 6/4 sash in each, while the center north facade has 8/8 sash and is located at stair landing level. All windows have louvered shutters. On west gable the fireplace back is exposed. Chimneys are located on each gable of the main portion and the east gable of the kitchen and wash house.

A hipped roof porch covers the north door and a long leanto porch covers the south door, both of excellent design for a country house. There is a dentil cornice on both sides of the house.

The original woodwork was removed during the first quarter of this century but a facsimile has been re-installed with fine detail.

This is a detailed topographical map of the Pomona, North Carolina area. The map shows the Pamlico River flowing through the center, with several necks branching off: Broad Neck to the west, Quaker Neck to the southwest, Spaniard Neck to the south, and Corsica Neck at the bottom. The town of Pomona is located in the upper center, with Johnsonstown and Cliffs City situated further south. The map is densely populated with labels for various points of interest, including 'Wilmington', 'Hollow Marsh Pt', 'Northwest Pt', 'Riverview Windmill', 'Bookers Wharf', 'Indian Town', 'Cliffs Wharf', and 'Ship Pt'. A thick black line, likely representing a major road or a specific survey boundary, runs from the bottom left, through the center, and towards the top right. A small rectangular box is drawn around a point labeled '89' in the upper right quadrant, near the intersection of the Pamlico River and a road labeled '664'. Other notable features include numerous windmills, wharves, and various creeks and coves. The map also shows the boundaries of Queen Anne's County and Brunswick County.
